

Coal Regions High-Level Conference

9 October 2019, 14.30-17.00, Room JDE 62

Taking place during the 2019 European Week of Regions and Cities (EWRC)

Political context

Following the Paris Agreement, the EU has committed to reducing annual greenhouse gas emissions by 40% comparing to 1990 levels by the year 2030, and at least 80% by 2050. Cutting coal-fired power generation is an important element in this context, which will have tangible economic and social effects on Europe's coal-producing regions. Lignite and coal are currently mined in 41 NUTS-2 regions, and there are coal-fired power stations in 103 NUTS-2 regions. The structural change initiated by energy policy decisions poses enormous challenges for the regions affected as for example recent debate in Germany highlighted. The phasing-out of coal one requires substantial resources (in the case of Germany 40 billion EUR until 2038).

The necessary resources exceed the resources the regions dispose of. Thus the regions concerned need support if the phasing-out of coal should become a success. Apart from national support, also the Cohesion Policy with its unique delivery mechanism could play a key role. The success of energy transformation depends on the ability of local and regional authorities to manage this change at the local and regional level, starting with the best practices, but also understanding local limitations and obstacles, but they also need the necessary resources.

Coal Regions High-Level Conference

9 October 2019, 14.30-17.00, Room JDE 62

Taking place during the 2019 European Week of Regions and Cities (EWRC)

Objectives

The High-Level Conference would have the following objectives:

- to highlight the close link between the European Union committing to ambitious climate targets and its territorial consequences for the 41 coal regions in Europe,
- to underline the need for a structural support of these regions through the European Union as a whole via additional means via Cohesion Policy provided through the future MFF,
- to promote a system of shared management with a strong involvement of the cities and regions as well as the social partners and the civic society to find a long term solution and
- to stress the need for a strong co-operation at European level between all levels of government to exchange experiences and promote new solutions.

Participants

The High-Level Conference will include national Ministers, Members of the European Parliament, the European Commission and high-level representatives from regions (Prime ministers or ministers).

The two CoR Rapporteurs Mr Mark Speich (DE/EPP) on “The socioeconomic transformation of coal regions in Europe” and Mr Witold Stepień (PL/EPP) on “Implementing the Paris Agreement through innovative and sustainable energy transition at regional and local level” will be present.
